Dallas, Texas, April 25.—William Jennings Bryan, defeated delegate-at-large from Nebraska to the democratic national convention in St. Louis, declared here Monday that he will attend the convention notwithstanding his defeat, as he has been doing since 1876—"when I was 16 years old." ERADICATION OF JOHNSON GRASS.

(By G. M. Garren, Agronomist, Extension Service, A. & M. College of Texas.)

There is no method of eradicating Johnson grass "while you wait." The quick, easy, inexpensive method has not yet been discovered. Its root stock habits of propagation renders it very probable that such a method will never be discovered. However, it can be eradicated by any farmer who is willing to pay the price of "keeping everlastingly at it." Eternal vigilance is the price of agricultural liberty in the eradication of Johnson grass.

It is a great farm nuisance in any field, especially where irrigation is practiced. Ordinary cultivation only sends the root stocks deeper into the loose soil and thereby renders eradication doubly difficult. The principle upon which its eradication depends is based upon the utter destruction of the root stocks. This principle can be applied by either direct or indirect methods. The direct, is the destruction of the root stocks outright. The indirect, is not to allow the tops to grow and thereby starve the roots to death.

Practical ways of applying these methods as they have been gathered from men in the field working at the job, are here submitted:

First. Turn badly infested land into pasture or meadow so the grass can be grazed or mown. The lack of cultivation keeps the root stocks near the surface of the ground where they can better be handled by the direct method. At the same time, the grazing or the mowing is starving the roots by the indirect method. All are agreed that continual pasturing will kill it, but it will require several years.

Second. The manager of a big irrigation farm in Medina County reports that last season he sowed his badly infested land in Sudan grass. At the end of the season the amount of infestation had been so greatly reduced, he is going to repeat the sowing of Sudan grass on the same land the present season. He believes he will by this method finally eradicate the Johnson grass. He is correct and will succeed. The very shallow cultivation required for Sudan grass and its frequent mowings are applications of both the direct and indirect methods.

Third. Another farmer on an irrigated farm near San Antonio, Texas, that is very badly infested, claims that he can practically eradicate it in one season by frequent turnings of the land and the consequent exposure of the root stocks to the hot sun during the months of July and August. This method, he claims, will destroy it all except a few isolated patches that can be easily handled. This is an application of the direct method. The objection to this method is, that a man loses the use of his land for at least two months. This objection can be partially overcome by grazing hogs on the freshly upturned roots.

In this instance and in all others, where there are only a few isolated patches to deal with, they can be destroyed by a heavy application of table salt. The salt will kill the roots and not permanently injure the land.

Fourth. In cultivated fields use the long sharp sweeps that will cut the grass just beneath the surface of the ground. The few bunches left in the rows will have to be cut with a hoe.
